Nine departments, collaborating with many campus units, work with students during their entire time at UW–Madison. We know that the Wisconsin Experience has the potential to be transformative. We strive to develop world leaders, engaged citizens, and interesting people. We have high expectations of students.

Our mission is to help our students make the most of their experiences at Wisconsin. We want them to get involved in something that matters, to consider themselves representatives of the university, to act with integrity in all they do, and to show respect to everyone they encounter. Students should take pride in themselves as world citizens and as scholars, demonstrate a strong work ethic, and capitalize on their opportunities and challenges. In promoting this behavior, we encourage Badgers to think not just about their future, but about their legacy.

That’s what it means to be a student at Wisconsin. That’s what it means to do things that matter and find purpose. Badgers make the world a better place.
